

RESUME

FRANK LOCKER PhD

Honored as Planner of the Year by the Association for Learning Environments, (formerly Council of Educational of Facility Planners International) for his comprehensive planning approach, consensus building process, and state-of-the-art school design, Frank leads clients to position their schools for the long term future through visioning, master planning, educational program development, educational specifications and collaborative concept design. A former college educator, certified facilitator, and registered architect, Frank bases his approach on research in effective learning and successful strategies for implementation. Frank is a frequent speaker at international and national school planning conferences, conceived and co-teaches the Learning Environments for Tomorrow course at Harvard University, and produces annual Project-Based Learning Conferences at colleges in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. He is an affiliate of the Partnership for 21st Century Learning.
